Fitch Upgrades PLDT's Local Currency IDR To BBB-, Assigns AAA(phil) National Rating

Fitch Ratings-Hong Kong/Singapore-7 June 2006: Fitch Ratings has today upgraded Philippine Long Distance Telephone Company's (PLDT) Long-term local currency Issuer Default Rating (IDR) to BBB- from BB+. The Outlook is Positive. At the same time, Fitch has affirmed PLDT's Long-term foreign currency IDR of BB with a Stable Outlook, which is reflective of the Outlook on the Republic of the Philippines Long-term foreign currency IDR of BB. The agency also affirmed PLDT's global bonds and senior notes at BB. Following the licensing of Fitch to provide National ratings in the Philippines, the agency has assigned PLDT a National Long-term rating of AAA(phil) with a Stable Outlook.

The upgrade of the local currency IDR recognises PLDT's continuing strong operating and financial performances and more robust nature which renders the company more resilient to changing industry dynamics than its competitors. Today's rating action also is acknowledgment that most of PLDT's key credit protection measures are much stronger than similarly rated operators in Asia and globally. The Positive Outlook reflects Fitch's expectation that PLDT can sustain its leading market positions whilst making further improvement to its financial profile despite the prospect of higher investment and shareholder distributions.

PLDT's ratings take into account its pre-eminent market position in the Philippine telecom industry. As the incumbent and the most diversified and integrated operator, PLDT enjoys an estimated 67% market share of local exchange service subscribers with around 2.1 million customers at FYE05. At the same time, aggregate cellular subscribers of subsidiaries Smart Communications Inc. and Pilipino Telephone Corporation was 20.4m at FYE05 (approximately 58% market share) which had increased to 20.9m by Q106. Furthermore, PLDT reportedly has some 80% of subscribers in the nascent broadband market. PLDT's leading industry position is partly attributable to the neutral regulatory regime but also to the relatively limited financial flexibility of most of its competitors. Consequently, PLDT remains well-positioned to capture a large percentage of net additions in industry subscribers and to invest in further growth opportunities.

Even though PLDT's fixed-line customer base has contracted slightly in recent years, it nevertheless generates stable, positive free cash flow (FCF). Meanwhile, its cellular units continue to boost FCF levels through subscriber growth and improved efficiency which has supported relatively high and expanding margins in recent years. On a consolidated basis, PLDT's robust operations and lower capex requirements have contributed to consistent increases in FCF in spite of its rising shareholder distributions. Surplus cash flow has facilitated significant net debt reduction hence a marked improvement in key credit metrics over time. For example, net adjusted debt (net debt plus 8x operating lease rentals) to EBITDAR has been lowered to 1.2x at FYE05 from 2.1x at FYE04. At the same time, funds from operations (FFO) to gross interest increased to 6.4x from 5.6x while FCF (post dividends) currently equates to 44% of net debt. Notwithstanding the capex required for 3G network rollout during 2006 to 2008 (estimated by PLDT to be USD150m) and rising shareholder returns, Fitch expects PLDT to further strengthen its financial profile on account of its decision to retire USD350m of debt in 2006. PLDT's continued de-leveraging is indicative of management's prudent approach of ensuring adequate financial flexibility to meet both internal requirements and to mitigate risk that might arise should competition intensify further in light of the penetration of the addressable cellular service market being 70% at FYE05 (estimated by Fitch) and the recent licensing of four 3G operators.

In order to trigger an upgrade of the local currency IDR, Fitch would expect PLDT to sustain net adjusted leverage around or below 1.0x, thus likely indicating that the management remains committed to ongoing fiscal prudence and that PLDT is able to manage well the prevailing industry challenges. On the other hand, the rating could be lowered should net adjusted leverage rise to 1.8x, which either would be event driven or signify that PLDT is more susceptible to industry volatility. In terms of its foreign currency IDR, PLDT remains constrained by the foreign currency IDR of the Republic of the Philippines, which currently is BB, Outlook Stable. The National rating of AAA(phl) incorporates all the above factors and is indicative of PLDT's relative credit strength among all Philippine companies.
