I INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY (APPROVED BY LEGAL)

151. HOW WILL LUCENT PROTECT THE INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY RIGHTS OF BELL LABS NOW THAT LUCENT IS MERGING WITH ALCATEL?

Lucent considers its patents to be one of its most valuable assets. In fact, Bell Labs scientists and engineers have earned more than 31,000 patents since 1925. And as of September 30, 2005, Lucent owned 7,000 patents in the United States and 8,100 patents in foreign countries. Lucent takes its responsibility to protect its patents very seriously and the combined company will continue to do so. In fact, the way the proposed merger is structured, all of the patents will continue to be owned by Lucent and its subsidiaries.

Lucent's intellectual property licensing division licenses, protects and maintains our intellectual property and enforces our intellectual property rights. This responsibility includes licensing our patents and technology to third parties and negotiating agreements regarding our licensing of intellectual property from others.

Because the industry is to a large extent driven by interoperability standards, to a large extent our patents are already licensed to other companies in the industry. By the same token, Lucent is licensed to use patents owned by these other companies. This is a common practice in the industry and would not be impacted by the proposed merger.

152. WHAT ABOUT THE PATENTS THAT ARE ASSOCIATED WITH THE RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT WORK THAT LUCENT DOES WITH THE U.S. GOVERNMENT?

As previously announced, the combined company is forming separate, independent U.S. Lucent subsidiary under Bell Labs for certain contracts with U.S. government agencies to ensure that this type of work continues to be performed in the U.S. with all of the proper safeguards in place. This type of structure is routinely used to protect certain government programs in the course of mergers involving a non-U.S. party.

Any patents associated with these certain contracts with the U.S. government, will be held by the independent U.S. subsidiary under Bell Labs to further ensure the safeguarding and protection of this sensitive work protect.

In addition, this subsidiary will be separately managed by a board, to be composed of three independent U.S. citizens whose appointment is subject to U.S. government approval.

We have asked William Perry, former Secretary of Defense; James Woolsey, former director on Central Intelligence; and Kenneth Minihan, former director of the National Security Agency to serve on this board. We believe these individuals will be acceptable to the U.S. government who must approve their appointments.
