HEADLINE: Mark Bertolini on Anthem/Cigna Announcement

Aetna's mission is to build a healthier world. We are committed to leading a transformation in health care, and to creating new products and services that will result in more healthy days for our members. Our pending acquisition of Humana aligns with this strategy and will accelerate our ability to realize our mission.

Humana is not only a leading Medicare Advantage business, but it also has a strong Health Services business, innovative Consumer assets, a leading pharmacy benefit manager (PBM), and relationships with providers that align with our accountable care strategy. Most importantly, with our shared culture and vision, our combined company will be well positioned to achieve our Vision 2020 aspirations.

Today, Anthem and Cigna announced plans to combine. This news does not at all change Aetna's vision or our commitment to acquire Humana. While these transactions will likely be discussed together in the media and elsewhere under the broad heading of "industry consolidation," they are actually two very distinct deals that involve different products and would result in two very different companies.

This is an exciting time for Aetna and the health care industry. While there will be media attention on the many aspects of the various deals, we need to remain focused on our current operating plan and strategy for the future. With your commitment and continued good work, we will achieve our vision of a healthier world.
