Re: Resignation

As we discussed at the board meetings on May 16-17, I will be resigning from the board of directors of ETF and ISL effective May 31, 2007. There are two primary reasons for my decision.

First, the policy of the Credit Suisse closed-end funds is to have a pre-meeting dinner at which the portfolio manager for each CS fund discusses its investment performance and prospects followed by an early morning formal board meeting the next day. To attend all the meetings, I have to travel on each of two successive days from Pleasantville to Manhattan and back four times a year. This is burdensome for me. I appreciate the offer to pay for a hotel room in Manhattan so I can sleep a little later on the morning of the formal board meeting but I don't want to spend four nights each year away from my beautiful and loving wife. (Even if she stayed with me at the hotel she would have to eat dinner and breakfast alone - hardly a romantic getaway. Also, we have a dog at home that needs to be walked and fed.)

Secondly, the legal and policy constraints on trading by directors have caused problems for me. As an investment advisor, I might face a conflict of interest if I believe it is in a client's best interest to buy or sell stock in a CS fund even when the trade is not based on any inside information but am not free to do so because of a law like Section 16 of the 1934 Act or a regulation or a fund policy or just the desire to avoid the appearance of impropriety. I question whether shareholders of closed-end funds are well served by such laws and policies since they deter large shareholders with investment advisory clients from serving on the board. That is unfortunate because such a shareholder would seem to have a strong economic incentive to be a vigilant director. In any case, it has become too difficult to justify my not selling ETF or ISL stock for clients if I think it is overvalued or buying it if I think it is undervalued.

After considering my options, I have decided to resign effective May 31, 2007.
