Petrobras sets refining production record

Rio de Janeiro, July 8 2010, Petróleo Brasileiro S.A. - Petrobras announces that on July 3 it set a production record of 2,020,000 barrels of oil per day at its refineries, 4% more than its previous record of 1,942,000 barrels per day.

The increased reference capacity at Replan, which resulted from the implementation of a project during the recent maintenance shutdown carried out at that refinery, and the high reliability of the facilities, which allowed for refining to occur near the reference capacities were the main factors of this result.

This record was attained with the integrated performance of the Downstream Area, in full compliance with the limits set forth for the equipment and systems, with the operational reliability guidelines, and with the Health, Safety and Environment principles that guide the Company's operations.
